

Understanding Adolescence

All of you are now in a transition period between childhood and adulthood which is called adolescence. In this unit, we will try to understand the process of growing up and other aspects surrounding adolescence.

Adolescence is characterised by several physical, social, physiological, cognitive and emotional changes. Since each one of us is unique, these changes also occur in different ways and at different points of time. This is an exciting phase where you start to take independent decisions, identify your rights, enjoy your freedom, explore and try new things, improve your social skills, form your value systems, develop attractions towards others and so on. However, this is also a vulnerable period where you are left confused. Since this is a phase of experimentation, it is possible that your decisions may not be well informed and might have a negative impact on you. You are likely to experience a lot of peer, parental and societal pressure also. We will identify the potentials and capabilities in this stage that will allow you to make positive changes as well as discuss some of the challenges that you might face in dealing with them.

Let us read the following newspaper article and discuss what you feel about the ideas put forward in the article. After discussing the article let us answer the questions given below. Similarly you can discuss the other articles that your teacher will share with you.

Glossary:

Body image: is how one views one's body and the feelings associated with it. Body image, which affects our self-esteem is influenced by many factors such as cultural background, fashion and movie industry, advertisements of cosmetic products, parent's and other's attitudes etc. Positive body image is when someone feels comfortable and good about themselves and their body, which leads to an increase in self-worth. Negative body image is when someone has negative emotions or feelings associated with their body.

Anorexia: is a behavioural disorder arising due to distorted body image and the intense fear of gaining weight. Anorexia is characterised by lack of interest and denial of food. Here, individuals try to lose weight by starving, fasting, excessive exercise, induced vomiting etc. Patients with anorexia are thin and underweight.

Bulimia: an eating disorder characterised by binge eating (eating excess amount in a short period of time) followed by some compensatory behaviour like self-induced vomiting, excessive exercise, fasting, eating at irregular intervals, etc. The patients with bulimia are of average or over weight.

Osteoporosis: a medical condition in which the bones become brittle and fragile from loss of tissue, typically as a result of hormonal changes, or deficiency of calcium and vitamin D.

Anorexia rising at an alarming rate

Rising obesity among children and adolescents might be the concern of many, but cases of young girls falling prey to eating disorders are increasing at an equally alarming rate. Ten years ago, the cases of eating disorders — the most common of which is anorexia nervosa — were rare in India. However, psychiatrists claim that in the past few years, the figure has increased from anywhere between 5 and 10 times. What is more alarming is that increasingly girls of a younger age are falling prey to anorexia and bulimia.

"Television and internet have come to rule our world and with both full of super slim models, young girls end up idolising them. There is immense emphasis on being thin by the society as well," says Dr Rajesh Sagar, department of psychiatry, AIIMS. Psychiatrists claim that even when young girls— as young as ten— in the city suffering from anorexia are shown photos of slim and fit women, they shockingly dismiss them as overweight. "Anorexia is about poor body image. When you are constantly told that thin is beautiful, then your opinion about your own body is certain to change to fit the accepted standard," says Dr Sanjay Chugh, founder chairman, International Institute of Mental Health.

An independent inquiry into health of models in UK recommended that girls below the age of 16 should be banned from walking the ramp. According psychiatrist Samir Parikh "These kind of measures are essential to project a more healthy body image of women. While eating disorders have disastrous consequences for women of all age groups, it can damage the health of an adolescent or pre-adolescent by retarding their growth."

Anorexia nervosa and bulimia nervosa can lead to severe nutritional deficiencies in young girls especially before puberty. Bones are the first to get affected and 50% of anorexic girls end up developing osteoporosis. When young girls are supposed to be packing their bones with calcium and protein rich food, anorexic girls are actually losing bone mass. Besides, they are also more prone to heart failure and hormonal changes which can lead to absence of menstruation resulting in infertility later on.

Psychiatrists claim that girls as young as seven to eight years of age have been skipping meals to stay thin. "In very young girls it is hard to spot anorexia, as refusal to eat food is seen as a stubborn behaviour. It's not until the disease progresses that parents and doctors are able to diagnose it. I have young girls who don't have any apparent weight problem asking to be put on a diet to lose weight," says Dr. Honey Khanna, dietician, Max Healthcare. Lack of "sports culture" in India has made the problem more acute. "If schools and parents push children to play sports, it would go a long way in fighting both obesity and eating disorders," adds Dr Sagar.
